Local Judges highlight tips for case management

In its continued effort to promote the administration of justice in the Richmond area and to facilitate cooperation between the bench and the bar, the Administration of Justice Committee recently concluded its annual interviews with the Honorable Judges of the Courts of the County of Hanover and the County of Chesterfield. As in years past, the Judges were gracious with their time and spoke with candor to Committee members regarding the Courts' work and the performance of the bar in their courtrooms. Additionally, the Judges shared new developments related to the relocation of the courts in Hanover and provided tips regarding scheduling of cases and motions hearings.

The Honorable J. Overton Harris Hanover Circuit Court

Judge J. Overton Harris, the presiding Judge of the Hanover Circuit Court is generally pleased with the caliber of attorneys that appear before him in Hanover Circuit Court. He states that the civility he sees between attorneys and prior preparation are always appreciated. Judge Harris would also like to thank all attorneys for their patience as the court adjusts to the new Hanover courts building which opened at the beginning of 2017. The change in physical location of the courts building brings with it unavoidable changes in some of the familiar processes of the court personnel and the court is still in the process of adjusting to its new premises. Notwithstanding the learning curve, Judge Harris says that it is great to be in the new facility.

The Hanover Circuit Court moved to a praecipe system in summer 2016. Under the prior system, either party could show up on Term Day and request that the matter be set for trial. The court found the prior system unwieldy, and it often resulted in the clerks scrambling to make sure that they had all of the necessary forms. Under the newly instituted praecipe system, a party who wants to set a matter for trial will need to file a praecipe at least five business days prior to Term Day (typically the Tuesday one week prior to docket call), on a form available from the clerk's office, giving the court notice of his or her intent to appear on Term Day and set a motion for trial. Judge Harris reports that the praecipe system appears to be working well; the clerks are able to be better prepared and the attorneys who appear before the court seem to be adjusting well to the new system.

In other court news, Judge Harris has seen the number of civil suits continue to increase over the past year, resulting in an increase in the number of trials and hearings being conducted. In an effort to better manage the docket, the court will continue to emphasize its policy of restricting continuances if the matter is set for trial within 30 days of the request for a continuance, unless the request is for good cause. If the trial date is more than 30 days out, the parties may still coordinate an agreed order for a continuance.

The Honorable Hugh S. Campbell Hanover General District Court

Judge Hugh S. Campbell, the presiding Judge of the Hanover General District Court reports that he and the court personnel are excited about the new Hanover courts building and are pleased with how it turned out. In the new building, the General District Court has two court rooms. Only one of the court rooms is full time, the second is used on a part time basis allowing the court to handle a higher volume of cases. Judge Campbell would like to remind attorneys appearing before the court to make use of the extra civil days scheduled for the third, fourth and fifth Tuesdays of each month. He encourages attorneys in the collection business, especially those who plan to bring 10 or more cases at a time, to focus on the extra civil days and to remember to bring original affidavits regarding the debt, especially in purchase debt situations. Judge Campbell would also like to remind attorneys appearing before the court to make use of the extra criminal days scheduled for the first and third Fridays of each month. Attorneys attempting to schedule or continue criminal or traffic cases are reminded that they should always first consult the clerk to obtain the officer's available dates. The full Hanover General District Court schedule can be found on the Virginia Judicial System website.

Judge Campbell offered three practice pointers for attorneys planning to appear before the court. First, he advises all attorneys to make sure that they update their firm database to the new address of the Hanover courts building: 7530 County Complex Road, Hanover, Virginia 23069. He notes that there could be procedural issues if an attorney mistakenly uses the old address. Second, Judge Campbell urges young or new attorneys to find a good mentor and to pay attention to seasoned attorneys both in and out of the courtroom. Finally, Judge Campbell has noticed a recent trend of attorneys making a motion to strike in inappropriate circumstances. Though he does not think that the trend has risen to the level of abuse, Judge Campbell believes that attorneys should attempt to be more deliberate and judicious with their motions to strike, recognizing that it is not a necessary or relevant motion in every case.

The Honorable Shannon O. Hoehl Hanover Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court

The most significant recent development for Hanover County courts, including the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court, is the opening of the new courts complex housing all three county courts. Courthouse personnel, including the judges, are very pleased with the new facilities and hope that they will help to better serve the public.

With the combination of the three courts in one building, the line to proceed through security is longer than it was in the old courthouse, and Judge Hoehl suggests that attorneys and litigants arrive a bit earlier for hearings to allow for that. Conveniences at the new courthouse include an increased number of attorney conference rooms, plans for a law library on the second floor, and electronic docket boards, where JDR cases involving child custody and visitation or juvenile criminal matters will be identified with the minor's initials only. The JDR court also now has video capability to allow defense attorneys to meet privately with their minor clients who are detained at Merrimac.

Judge Hoehl would like to remind attorneys that if they have a scheduling conflict with a pretrial date, they can fax a letter with available dates, whether or not they request a guardian ad litem, and the amount of time requested for the hearing to the court and the court will set the case accordingly. The court disfavors continuing the pretrial hearing, as it causes undue delay for the litigants, and prefers to simply schedule contested hearings by letter if necessary, as opposed to carrying over the pretrial to another date. Counsel may remove a hearing from the docket for a settled matter by submitting a signed consent order by fax, with the original to follow by mail.

The criminal bar should be aware that the court will permit counsel time to speak privately with a client or witness prior to a hearing if the attorney has made a genuine effort to contact the individual prior to court but was unable to do so through no fault of the attorney. The court will pass by a case to permit counsel a few minutes to interview a witness or confer with a client.

Judge Hoehl commends the guardians ad litem that practice before her court for their work, but asks that if a guardian has not met with his or her minor client prior to the hearing, the guardian inform the court of that fact at the outset of the hearing.

The Honorable Timothy J. Hauler Chesterfield Circuit Court

Judge Hauler is the Chief Judge for the Chesterfield Circuit Court, which continues to administer a very active civil and criminal docket. Indeed, since 2005 the annual number of cases handled by the court has nearly doubled (with approximately 16,000 cases being concluded in 2016). On January 17, 2017, the Court issued updated docketing procedures in an effort to streamline the heavy volume of cases and improve the court's overall efficiency. Copies of the new docketing procedures are available in the clerk's office, the judges' chambers, the Office of the Commonwealth's Attorney and at the following website: <http://www.courts.state.va.us/courts/circuit/chesterfield/home.html>.

Under the new docketing procedures, the court encourages counsel to pre-set both civil and criminal cases rather than waiting for docket call. To set a case for trial in a civil matter, attorneys should call or email the assigned judge's legal assistant. Criminal matters are pre-set in the Commonwealth's

the best practices for case management

Attorney's Office by orders endorsed by defense counsel or a pro se defendant.

When scheduling civil cases by phone, email, or at docket call, a confirmation letter must be mailed to all parties within 10 business days of scheduling, with a copy to the court. In addition, counsel for the plaintiff is required to submit an agreed and fully endorsed pre-trial scheduling order within 10 calendar days of setting the trial date. Additional information concerning civil and criminal scheduling and the court's continuance policy are provided in the court's new docketing procedures.

Given the court's busy schedule, Judge Hauler would prefer to see fewer instances of "piggy-backing" with respect to motions – i.e., scheduling a motion for a hearing, but then filing subsequent motions to be heard at the same time. If subsequent motions are necessary, counsel should call the court to inquire about additional hearing time. Counsel should also stay within their allotted hearing time, which will allow the court to remain on schedule for other matters.

In addition, whenever possible and practicable under the circumstances, Judge Hauler would like to encourage counsel handling criminal matters to be more forthcoming with plea deals, as opposed to striking a deal just prior to trial. The court would prefer not to have to call off a jury at the last minute.

Judge Hauler would also like to remind counsel that the receptionists in the judges' chambers will not accept filings. Filings are only accepted by the clerk's office via mail, courier, and hand delivery. Furthermore, counsel is reminded that the new public service hours of both the clerk's office and the judges' chambers are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In general, Judge Hauler is very pleased with the caliber of attorneys that appear before the court. Although the level of civility among attorneys has improved over the years, he would still like to see additional progress, particularly in the area of family law and contested divorces.

The Honorable Pamela O'Berry Chesterfield General District Court

Judge O'Berry has been a judge in Chesterfield General District Court since 2009, serving as Chief Judge since 2012. She finds the attorneys practicing before her to be a hard-working, cordial, well-prepared group and considers herself fortunate to be part of this community.

Judge O'Berry noted that the volume of cases in Chesterfield General District Court has recently leveled out compared to the steady increase she observed between 2009 and 2015. She further noted that this may be due, at least in part, to the Honorable Matthew Donald Nelson joining the court in December 2014. However, even with the addition of Judge Nelson, the judges in Chesterfield General District Court stay very busy, with full dockets every day and two judges having Friday afternoon dockets each week.

The court and the clerk's office are working diligently to be more accessible, efficient and effective. As such, the judges try to keep cases moving relatively quickly. According to Judge O'Berry, most of the judges would prefer to set civil matters for trial within 60 to 90 days of the return date. Attorneys who request a trial date more than 90 days from the return date should be prepared to explain why additional time is required. In addition, counsel should be mindful of the amount of time they request for a trial. Unless a civil matter involves complicated issues or multiple witnesses, the court would prefer to schedule trials for no more than 2 hours. The court would also welcome the use of technology during trials, particularly when technology can assist counsel with moving through the case more efficiently.

In general, the court is very pleased with the attorneys on its court-appointed list. However, because they are often in high demand, the court has difficulties when these attorneys are in other jurisdictions on days they are scheduled to be in Chesterfield. The court asks these attorneys to "be present" and "fully engaged" when representing these clients. In addition, the court intends to issue written guidance in 2017 explaining the criteria that are considered when approving attorneys to be added to the court-appointed list.

The Honorable Jayne Ann Pemberton Chesterfield Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court

Currently the court has five judges, and has been utilizing substitute judges over last several months due to the vacancy created by the retirement of Judge Bonnie Davis. The judges are very excited that the General Assembly has now filled the vacancy created by Judge Davis' retirement and appointed Duncan Minton, who will be taking the bench on March 1, 2017.

Chesterfield JDR has a set docket which provides that civil cases are heard on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and criminal cases are heard on Tuesdays and Thursdays. In Colonial Heights, court is conducted on Thursdays and Fridays. In both courts, contested civil matters are heard Monday through Thursday at 2:00 p.m. The court's goal is to have "one court, one family" for continuity for families and children before the court.

Judge Pemberton observes that Chesterfield is very fortunate to have good attorneys, with collegiality, civility and professionalism. With that in mind, she would like to remind attorneys to introduce themselves to the court at the outset of any hearing or trial as well as introducing their client. This will assist the judges in being able to call the parties and counsel by name throughout the time they are before the court. Further, it is important to be on time to court. If you are an attorney running late for court, please contact the clerk's office. Also, the judges would like attorneys to exchange as much information before court as possible, such as child support guidelines and income information in support matters. Any attempt to streamline cases and resolve certain issues before trial is appreciated.

In regard to attorneys before the court as guardian ad litem (GAL) for the child, it is imperative to communicate with all parties and ensure there is a clear understanding of each parties' desired outcome before they appear in court. There are times when perhaps certain issues may be resolved before the hearing if all parties are communicating. There are some judges that are requiring GALs to submit a completed checklist before trial. This is not a requirement of all judges, but it is certainly expected that all GALs will follow the Standards to Govern the Performance of Guardians ad litem from the Supreme Court. The court hopes to hold a bench bar conference in the coming months for local attorneys in efforts to provide more constructive information. Once again, Judge Pemberton stressed the bench's appreciation for all the hard work and dedication of the attorneys that appear in Chesterfield JDR, but noted that we always strive to make the court process better.
